

To whom it may concern:

It is the governments duty to protect citizens rights above and beyond companies and profit. Please protect net neutrality and the level playing field it creates. America thrives on competition. Allowing companies to manipulate our internet speeds for profit goes against that spirit of competition and creates additional barriers to market entry. This would reduce American innovation, job production, and allow status quo technologies to have significant advantage over superior products that lack the capital to purchase a speed advantage.

Please don't let the telecom giants strangle our countries future while they reap the only benefits.

Sincerely,
Rebecca Carter
